SUBJECT: Potential Funds Surplus in the FY 1969 Office of Logistics Property Procurement Allotment

5. It is not possible to rationalize with certitude the existence of this surplus. We do know, however, that a portion of it has been created by advance procurement undertaken by the Office of Logistics with yearend funds allotted to it in June 1968. By virtue of such advance procurement, it has not been necessary to replenish certain stocks at a normal rate. The lack of need, therefore, to replenish stocks in those particular commodities has contributed to a portion of the surplus.

25X1A 6. This Office will interpose no objections if the Director of Planning, Programming, and Budgeting wishes to withdraw [REDACTED] from the Office of Logistics Property Procurement Allotment. We further propose to take action to invest [REDACTED] to 25X1A acquire needed stocks of new ordnance items in order to continue to support [REDACTED] operations. Beyond these two positions, we also raise for consideration two additional points:

a. We suggest this Office be authorized to expend an additional $500,000 for the Property Procurement Allotment for advance procurement of general materiel against FY 1970 needs.

b. We also suggest that no further action be taken on any remaining potential surplus until approximately 15 May 1969, by which time we will have the advantage of reviewing and analyzing the official financial reports for the month of April 1969.

Mr. Coffey:

use of old inventory, largely ordnance is probably the biggest reason for the surplus.

OL could spend the 500,000
to surge procure without O-PPB approval, but, given the present surge climate, I agree that it should be included.
